S4: 21st Century Regulatory Framework [4:15 pm – 5:45 pm]

Harmonizing and balancing policies & regulatory approaches for converging industries in society interest

The digital transformation and the development of new business models challenges existing regulation in various industries and could impede the opportunities of businesses to exploit new technologies and business models. One of the key challenges is that technologies advance at a rapid pace and legislation is always in danger of lagging behind. Furthermore the policy-makers have been working in silos instead of applying a “whole-of-government” approach when addressing the challenges. How can we avoid that digital transformation leads to fragmentation? What is the right regulatory answer to the digital transformation that balances the interests of companies with those of consumers and society? And how alternative governance measures can be used for agile regulation of industries across the board?

Technologies like Artificial Intelligence, Blockchain, Big Data and Internet of Things are evolving quickly these years. Private companies and talents are – among other things – drawn by an attractive digital growth environment, where new and value-creating solutions are developed and where new digital start-ups can emerge and succeed. Towns, cities and regions around the world are leveraging digital technologies to meet enormous challenges ranging from mobility and energy to climate change, as well as challenges to their citizen's health, security, economies and culture. These communities, whether large or small, urban or rural, are taking conscious steps to create an economy and ecosystems capable of prospering in it, and in the process, transforming them into Smart Cities and Intelligent Communities.

But, how will our brick and mortar cities with legacy copper wired technology be able to embrace cognitive computing and AI? Will autonomous cars survive our cobblestones roads or vice-versa and how can our historical buildings become intelligent? How can cities learn from and help each other regarding the digitization of public services and infrastructures?
